The first quarter of 2026 marked a strong start to the year for Optima bank, with our performance reaffirming the strengths of our business model and the effectiveness of our strategic priorities. Net profit increased by 22% year-on-year, reflecting sustained revenue momentum, disciplined cost management and continued balance-sheet expansion.

Growth across our core activities remained healthy. Loan volumes expanded further, supported by strong demand from high-quality corporate clients, while deposit inflows continued supporting our business. Net interest income expanded, benefiting from higher loan balances and the favourable interest rate environment, while fee and commission income maintained strong momentum. At the same time, our cost base remained well controlled, allowing positive operational leverage and reinforcing our position among the most efficient banks in the European banking space.

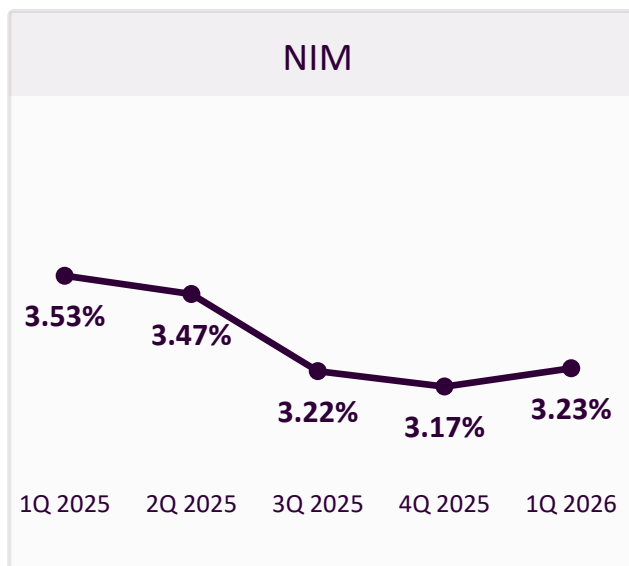

Asset quality remained solid in the first quarter, with non-performing exposures at low levels and the cost of risk firmly contained. Our capital and liquidity positions continue to provide strength and flexibility, enabling us to support further growth while maintaining a prudent risk profile and strong buffers against potential macroeconomic volatility. Our SREP results were more than satisfactory leading our new capital requirements to be lower than our previous ones, reflecting the confidence of the regulator in our Bank.

During the quarter, Optima bank announced its intention to acquire a majority stake in Euroxx Securities. This transaction represents the first brownfield investment of the Bank and it is expected to enhance our brokerage and investment banking business. Completion of the acquisition is expected by year end and will be EPS accretive from day 1.

Looking ahead, we acknowledge the challenges in the international environment and potential spill-over effects from the Middle East crisis, however we remain confident on the resilience of the Greek economy and the solid foundations built in the post crisis period. The Bank remains firmly focused on supporting its clients, and growing the book selectively, anchored on thorough risk assessment. The strong start to the year reinforces our conviction that Optima bank is well positioned to sustain attractive returns to our shareholders.
